Cha-ching! Cha-ching! Cha-ching!

- MBTA fare hikes are now in full effect
- Some demand better service, more bang for their buck
- Other riders say the increase is reasonable {page 02}

▶ Even though they knew higher fares were coming, some riders said it didn't sink in until they had to shell out more money yesterday.

If you hadn't heard ...

Today is the first work day with new T fares ◗ Some riders are not bothered by hikes, but others demand service ◗ Fare evasions planned

COURTNEY SACCO AND NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

▶ Dig deep, Boston, this ride will cost you.

▶ If you buy a monthly pass, you will now shell out an extra $132 per year.

Yesterday was the first day of the MBTA's new fare system, which raises the cost of riding the T by an average of 23 percent. Like any Sunday, the T was not nearly as bustling as an average work day, but residents were still out and about, drawn by sunny weather and the buzz of Wednesday's holiday.

Occasional T rider Kenny Irwin said he was not bothered by the changes.

"I think it's fine. The MBTA is very old, and like anything else it needs money. People don't like paying more money for anything, whether it is taxes or a beer," he said as he waited for the Green Line.

Subway fares rose from $1.70 to $2 for passengers who pay with CharlieCards, and bus fares rose by a quarter, to $1.50. The Ride, a para-transit service for the elderly and disabled, doubled to $4.

The increases, which also come with cuts to several bus routes and some weekend commuter rail service, were imposed to help close the system's $160 million deficit.

For George Bretthauer, it's not a problem to pay a little more, as long as it is reflected in the service. But as it stands now, he's not impressed.

"There are a lot of late trains, but you're still paying more money. I think there needs to be better service for what we're paying," he said. "It's hurting a lot of people, especially part-timers; it's killing them because they aren't making that kind of money."

Brendan Pugh, a frequent Orange Line rider, bought a monthly pass yesterday for $70, up from $59.

"I know they've been putting the message out that 'It's coming, it's coming,' but it still was a surprise today," Pugh said, adding that while considers himself to be "relatively happy" with the T service, he understands how some commuters would be upset.

"If I lived on the E Line, or any of the Green Lines, frankly, I would definitely be looking for other alternatives; because even under prime circumstances, that service is terrible. So the fact that they're increasing it, and we're not going to see an improvement, if anything we're going to see a detraction, is ridiculous."

Money matters

- It is the first time the MBTA has raised fares since 2007.
- MBTA officials have estimated a new deficit in 2014 of $100 million.

Fare strikers learn evasion techniques

In the wake of the MBTA's first fare hike since 2007, an activist group calling itself "Boston Fare Strike" decided to hone its skills as fare-dodgers.

About 30 activists gathered on the lawn across from Copley Station yesterday afternoon for a training session on how to hop a free bus ride.

The activists split off into small groups and practiced reasoning their way past bus drivers.

Despite the MBTA's assurance that it is cracking down on fare evasion, activists hope the civil disobedience will send a message.

"It seems that this is our only option," said an Occupy Boston spokesperson going by the name Julie Almond, who helped organize yesterday's fare strike.

The Boston Fare Strike website says that the group sees fare evasion as "a first step in a long-term struggle to not only defend but improve our public transit service."

According to MBTA police, anyone caught evading fare will get a non-criminal citation and could face fines of up to $250.

In anticipation of people looking to jump turnstiles in acts of defiance against the new fare hikes, MBTA Spokesman Joe Pesaturo said, "Their selfish acts are misguided, and will serve to do nothing more than worsen the MBTA's already fragile financial condition."

According to Boston Fare Strike website, "Jumping turnstiles, boarding buses through the back or very quickly through the front, and leaving doors open in subway stations are all fare evasion tactics."

The U.S. Census Bureau announced Friday that Boston's population continues to grow. According to census numbers compiled between April 2010 and July 2011, the Hub's population has increased to 625,087 from 617,594 reported in the 2010 census. The 1.2 percent increase represents 7,493 people and is double the Massachusetts average growth rate over that time period. METRO

REVERE. Transit officials opened the new Wonderland Intermodal Transit Center with a ribbon-cutting ceremony Saturday.

The station features a new bus way, improved pedestrian access, bicycle accommodations and a new parking garage that can accommodate roughly 1,500 vehicles.

Officials called the opening a milestone for the $500 million redevelopment of Revere's Waterfront Square. METRO

Forget London! Boston is the place to be this summer

With major events in Hub this week, Boston is the place to be Nearly a million visitors are expected
With all those people, making your way through the city may become a bit challenging

London may have the Olympics later this summer, but Boston right now has Harborfest, OpSail and the Fourth of July.

The major events are bringing Tall Ships from all over the world, nearly a million tourists and big bucks to Boston. Harborfest and OpSail kicked off late last week and continue through this week when the Boston Pops will play their annual Fourth of July concert on the Esplanade. The ships are also marking the bicentennial of the War of 1812.

More than 800,000 are expected to descend on the Hub and bring with them nearly $24 million in spending money.

With all of those people, transportation may get tricky, especially in the Seaport Distrcit where many of the tall ships will be docked and open for free tours.

Transportation officials started cautioning drivers Wednesday with announcements on highway signs warning of potential delays around the Harbor.

Parking restrictions in South Boston and in the Seaport area will be in place and some roadways may be shut down for pedestrians.

The area is also where multiple construction projects have broken ground and roads and walkways are already partially blocked.

However, Mayor Thomas Menino said recently that it wasn't a concern for city officials who would be monitoring the events.

▶ Ships from Brazil, Columbia, Ecuador and Indonesia are docked at the South Boston Fish Pier.

Not-to-miss events

Just some of the many events taking place this week:

- Free public tours of the tall ships will take place from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Charlestown Navy Yard and from 4 p.m. until 8 p.m. in the Seaport District. The ships in the Seaport will open from noon to 8 p.m. Wednesday.
- Starting at 11 a.m. Wednesday, the Navy Blue Angels will perform a fly-over during the USS Constitution's annual turnaround from the Charlestown Navy Yard.
- The Boston Pops perform their annual free concert on the Esplanade Wednesday with guest Jennifer Hudson. The concert starts at 8 p.m. with the fireworks display starting at 10:35 p.m.

Waterfront parking painful

Drivers are urged to ditch their cars this week, as thousands are expected to attend the July Fourth fireworks celebration on the Esplanade and check out the picturesque tall ships.

Until Friday, the Seaport District will have a parking ban on Congress Street from B Street to Northern Avenue, and on Northern Avenue from B Street to Congress Street.

On Wednesday, many South Boston roadways will be closed to parking from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m., with bans on Day Boulevard from Castle Island to East Broadway Extension, Shore Road, and Day Boulevard from L Street to G Street.

Most of the Esplanade roadways will be off-limits to motorists Wednesday. Starting at midnight there will be no public parking on either side of Storrow Drive or Memorial Drive, and at 7 a.m, both sides of Storrow Drive will be closed to traffic. Come 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, Memorial Drive and the Longfellow bridge will be closed in both directions. METRO

Support for Obamacare on the rise after Supreme Court blessing

Voter support for President Barack Obama's health care overhaul has increased following the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling upholding it, a Reuters/Ipsos poll released yesterday showed.

Among all registered voters, support for the law rose to 48 percent in the online survey conducted after Thursday's ruling, up from 43 percent before the court decision.

The survey showed increased backing from Republicans and, crucially, the political independents whose support will be essential to winning the Nov. 6 presidential election.

Thirty-eight percent of independents supported the healthcare overhaul. That was up from 27 percent from a Reuters/Ipsos poll taken days before the justices' ruling.

"This is a win for Obama. This is his bill. There's not really any doubt in people's minds, that it belongs to him," said Julia Clark, vice president at Ipsos Public Affairs. "It's his baby. It's literally been labeled Obamacare. ... Maybe it works in his favor now that there's a little bit of a victory dance going on."

Republican opposition to the law stayed strong, if somewhat weaker than before the high court ruled. Eighty-one percent of Republicans opposed it in the most recent survey, down from 86 percent in the poll conducted June 19-23. REUTERS

Will states be ready to act?

Policy experts question whether enough U.S. states will be ready to implement the health care law when it takes full effect in 2014.

Up to now, most states have avoided decisive action to build the private insurance exchanges. Governors in largely Republican states who oppose the entire law may still refuse to act on the exchanges, requiring the federal government to step in to operate them. REUTERS

Dish drops 'Mad Men' for 'Bikini Barbershop'

NEW YORK. Dish Network Corp., following through on a threat to remove AMC Networks Inc.'s channels, replaced "Mad Men," "The Walking Dead" and other AMC programs with movies and shows from HDNet.

AMC, IFC and WE tv were dropped from Dish, the second-largest U.S. satellite-TV provider, AMC Networks said in a statement.

Dish said last week it would replace AMC with commercial-free movies from HDNet. HDNet's main channel, with shows such as "Bikini Barbershop" and "Drinking Made Easy," will stand in for IFC, the Independent Film Channel. The Style channel will replace WE tv, a network aimed at women. BLOOMBERG

Japan restarts first reactor since crisis

TOKYO. Kansai Electric Power Co. yesterday restarted the 1,180-megawatt No. 3 unit at its Ohi atomic plant, the utility said, Japan's first nuclear reactor to come back online since the Fukushima crisis, despite public safety concerns.

The government on June 16 approved the restart of the No. 3 and No. 4 reactors at the Ohi plant to avert a potential summer power crunch, sparking street protests around Japan.

The No.4 unit will resume operations later this month.

Opinion polls have shown around 70 percent of Japanese voters want to ditch nuclear power in the long term. REUTERS

US praises EU embargo of Iranian oil, presses Tehran

WASHINGTON. The White House praised the European Union for prohibiting Iranian crude oil imports into the 27-nation-bloc yesterday and said Tehran had an opportunity in talks this week to make progress on international concerns about its nuclear program.

"The United States welcomes the European Union's prohibition of all Iranian crude oil imports and other sanctions on Iran's oil industry, which go into full effect today," White House spokesman Jay Carney said in a statement.

Carney said the EU move was an "essential part" of diplomatic efforts in dealing with Iran. REUTERS

Deadly heat wave bakes US; millions left without power

Much of the eastern United States sweltered under oppressive heat for at least the third straight day yesterday after violent storms took a dozen lives and knocked out power to more than 3 million customers.

Emergencies were declared in Maryland, Ohio, Virginia, West Virginia, and Washington, D.C., on Saturday because of damage from overnight storms, which unleashed hurricane-force winds across and a 500-mile stretch of the mid-Atlantic region.

Power crews worked to restore service to homes and businesses, and officials in some areas said the job could take up to a week. Utilities in Ohio, Virginia and Maryland described damage to their power grids as catastrophic. In Ohio, power outages hit two-thirds of the state with about 1 million homes and businesses left without electricity.

The mercury hit 106 degrees in Atlanta on Saturday, according to Accuweather.com.

President Barack Obama authorized FEMA to coordinate all disaster relief efforts in storm-ravaged Ohio.

The storms' rampage came amid roasting temperatures that topped 100 degrees in several southern cities, including Atlanta, where the mercury hit 106 degrees. One of the hardest-hit cities was Charlotte, N.C., where the mercury hovered at about 101 degrees yesterday afternoon.

From St. Louis to Washington, the forecasts were for temperatures that could climb to more all-time records. REUTERS

Training spotlight: Automotive repair

BRAND X PICTURES

▶ The domestic automotive industry is bouncing back, and so are careers in domestic automobile repair.

Howard W. Ferris is the dean of transportation and energy at Massachusetts Bay Community College. He has nearly 40 years of experience in the automotive repair industry and oversees all the auto tech courses at MassBay, one of the leading programs in the country.

$36,180

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, as of 2011 the median pay for auto mechanics was $36,180 per year.

What would you look for in a training program?

I would want to see a direct relationship with the industry; there are ... at least 50 nationwide. At MassBay, we have partnerships with Toyota, BMW, Chrysler and GM. When schools have these partnerships, they offer exposure to the latest and greatest technology. I would also want to see a co-op component. No matter how great your training environment is, it has to be contrived on some level or it's not the actual conditions.

What's the difference between a community college technician program and a private technical school?

Community college programs are generally subsidized by the taxpayers, so it can be more affordable. We also offer an associate's degree, which might be good if you think you might want to do something different down the road.

Yours is a two-year program, and technical school programs are usually six months to a year.

Yes. They concentrate on the core automotive courses. We have an academic core that needs to be fulfilled.

Did the collapse of the domestic automotive industry affect your program?

Yes. But we've come back just as fast. People really want to work on a domestic product. As long as the companies are viable — which they are — it's not a problem.

The letters to look for in a training program ...

NATEF: The National Automotive Technicians Education Foundation is a nonprofit that evaluates automotive training courses. Schools with NATEF certification are considered legitimate programs in the industry.

ASE: Fewer than half of all automotive mechanics nationwide are Automotive Service Excellence-certified in at least one area of expertise. ASE certification is a great way to get a leg up in the industry, and a school that offers a clear path toward this credential is invaluable.

THE WORD

Metro's Monica Weymouth shares her take on the world of gossip @monicaatmetro monica.weymouth@metro.us

Congrats, Adele!

Over the weekend, Adele announced that she is pregnant with her first baby with boyfriend Simon Konecki.

"I'm delighted to announce that Simon and I are expecting our first child together," the singer posted on her website. "I wanted you to hear the news direct from me. Obviously, we're over the moon and very excited."

Babies, boyfriends, No. 1 albums: How is Adele supposed to pen super-catchy songs about heartbreak when this is what she's waking up to? This lady is one puppy away from a Metro intervention.

Adele

Katie Holmes gets feisty in divorce

We all knew that when Tom Cruise and Katie Holmes got a divorce, it was going to be a weird one.

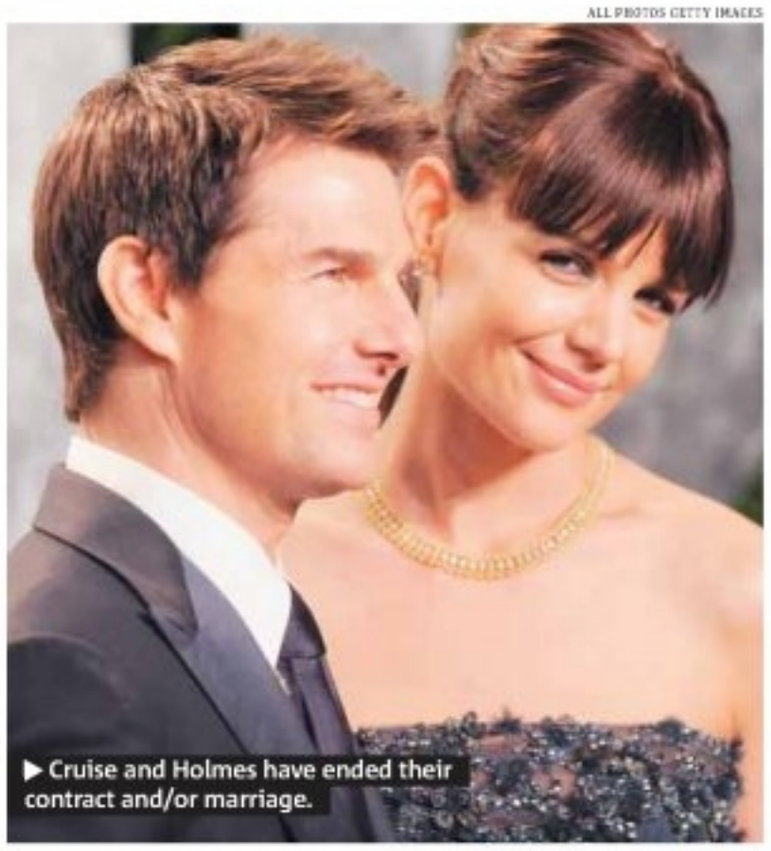
What we didn't expect was that after five years, Katie would snap out of her dead-behind-the-eyes trance with so much fight left in her.

Before filing for divorce on Thursday, the actress had already rented a separate apartment for herself in New York. Although she does occasionally live in the city, it could have been a strategic move: She's requesting sole custody of 6-year-old daughter Suri, which is more likely to be granted in New York than Los Angeles, where joint custody is more popular.

"Katie's primary concern remains, as it always has been, her daughter's best interest," Holmes' lawyer said in a statement Friday.

The "best interest" part is, reportedly, a reference to the Church of Scientology, which Holmes doesn't want Suri raised in. Although a high-profile member while with Cruise, Holmes is now afraid that she is considered a "threat" to the organization — similar to how Nicole Kidman was shunned after her divorce from Cruise in 2001 — and is being followed around New York by church authorities, reports TMZ.

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES



▶ Cruise and Holmes have ended their contract and/or marriage.

Creepy? For sure. But if Scientology wants to be respected as a real religion in 2012, it's going to have to start doing much more depraved stuff than stalking Katie Holmes.

A surprise?

In statement released by his rep, Tom Cruise claims he is "deeply saddened" to learn of the filing, which happened while he was shooting on location in Iceland. And yes, while we're also hesitant to believe Cruise feels real human emotions off camera, it does seem possible that he wasn't expecting the filing: Sources tell Us Weekly that the family was recently spotted having fun at a Reykjavik restaurant.

Just last month, he was being closer to cute than couch-jumping-crazy when speaking about his wife to Playboy. "She is an extraordinary person, and if you spent five minutes with her, you'd see it," he said.

Well now, this is awkward: Tom Cruise-as-robot is one of the few sacred truths of this page. Katie, we don't have much over here — please don't take this from us.

Talking points

Brown vs. Drake continues

In the grand tradition of setting rap beefs to song, Chris Brown released a remix of "Game Don't Like" over the weekend addressed to Drake, who he feuded with in a notorious New York nightclub incident recently. The lyrics, in part., read: "One on one, what you scared bruh? / Huh, matter of fact, 'Take Care' bruh." "Take Care" is the name of Drake's second album.

Kim Kardashian: Spanx a lot

She may have one of the world's most famous figures, but Kim Kardashian admits that she isn't always happy with what she sees in the mirror. "I'm such a perfectionist. I don't think I'm ever really comfortable," she admits in an interview with the U.K.'s "Lorraine" show, while calling Spanx "the greatest invention."

Hart

As for dieting, she prefers to hit the gym. "I don't eat as good. I work out all the time," she says.

It's a boy ... or a girl for Hart

Melissa Joan Hart is getting ready to become a mom for the third time, but she's keeping the baby's gender a surprise. "We always wanted the mystery the other two times around, but the first time we gave into pressure from everyone and curiosity and the second time our ultrasound technician gave it away before we had a chance to stop them," she tells People.

No drinking and parenting for Snooki

Snooki plans to move in with fiance Jionni LaValle's family when her baby arrives, and she's already set some house drinking rules. "Me and Jionni have made a rule: If we're hungover or if we've had two drinks, we're not going near the child," she tells Us Weekly. "We'll give him to grandma. God forbid we drop our baby!"

The feed ...

▶ Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

@BetteMidler: All the actors are young and getting younger. I remember when stars had glamour. And pubic hair.

@AlbertBrooks: Based on the success of Magic Mike I am now developing a 3D lap dancing movie.

@Joan_Rivers: Any moron offended by the gay pride rainbow Oreo cookie would die if they knew what the Keebler elves were doing inside the Hollow Tree.

@Questlove: Worst feelin ever: do a 2 hr show/2 hr dj gig. drippin wet. get back to hotel to discover @Delta has yet to deliver my lost luggage.

Party rockers, reckless bikers, smiling grooms in the house

1 Will Arnett can ignore all of the bicycle safety codes he wants, as long as he keeps looking as cute as he was when he was leaving Whole Foods in New York City on Thursday. But seriously, Will, if you can't hear a horn beeping with those ear buds in, you might hurt that pretty little non-helmet-wearing head of yours. Take care, Gob Bluth!

2 On Thursday, members of the Guinness Book of World Records awarded Wayne Coyne and the Flaming Lips a certificate for breaking a record set by Jay-Z for the most consecutive live concerts in multiple cities within 24 hours. The new record is now eight cities in 24 hours.

3 When does Adam Levine sleep, and how does he look like an entirely different person when he wears glasses? On Friday, the Maroon 5 singer and Keira Knightley filmed scenes for the upcoming movie "Can a Song Save Your Life?" in New York City.

4 No it was not opposite day on Saturday: Alec Baldwin was just a little more courteous to photographers than he has been in recent history. This may have had something to do with the fact that he was on his way into St. Patrick's Old Cathedral in New York City, where he wed yoga instructor Hilaria Thomas. Also spotted walking into the ceremony were Tina Fey, Woody Allen and Mariska Hargitay.

5 Loud colors, inflatable zebras, Shufflebot and the party rocking combo of Redfoo and SkyBlu can only mean one thing. It's LMFAO in concert. They performed at the Wells Fargo Center in Philly on Friday.

7 Katy Perry took a few selfies for fans at the Australian premiere of her "Part of Me" movie on Saturday night.

How to find a therapist

Metro's newest advice columnist, Kim Schneiderman, is here with help

I'd like to start seeing a therapist. How do I go about choosing someone? I'm a little nervous to tell all my secrets to a stranger.

Finding the right therapist is a bit like dating — with a few exceptions, as you can imagine.

I'm not recommending skipping from therapy couch to couch until you find the perfect match. But unless the professional sitting before you gives you the willies, I would suggest giving him or her at least three visits to see if your comfort level increases. But even comfort can be a tricky thing; if your new therapist reminds you of the mother you hate, it could be a good match — she might help you access and work through the thoughts and feelings about your mother that always trip you up in relationships.

What happens in the room between client and therapist is often a reflection of what happens outside the room between clients and their significant relationships. Consequently, a good healing relationship with a therapist can be a powerful thing. But I'm getting ahead of myself.

No insurance necessary

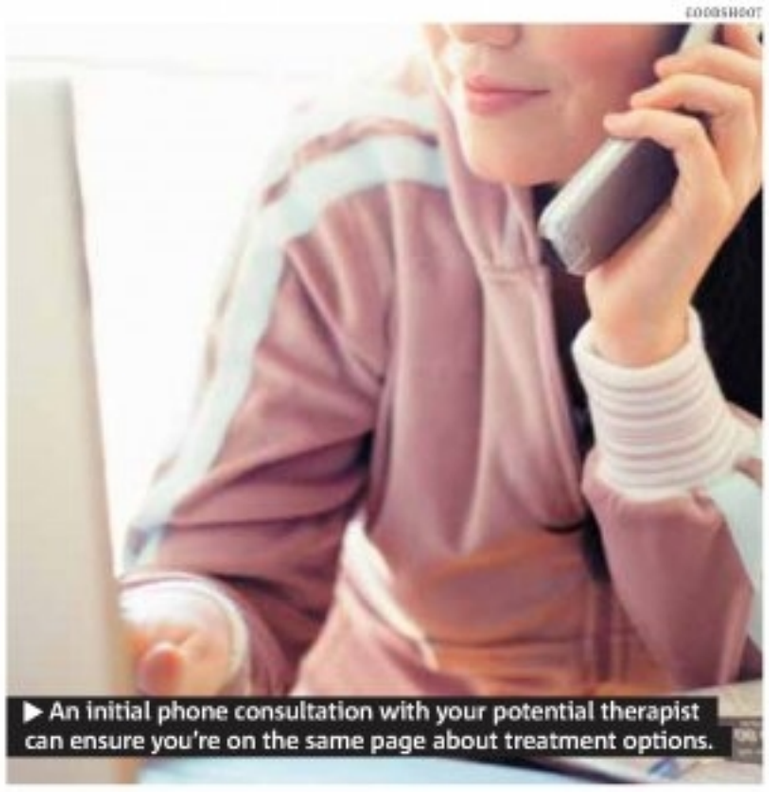
KIM SCHNEIDERMAN, MSW, LCSW

WWW.NOVEL-PERSPECTIVE.COM

Here are some basic considerations:

1 Make sure the therapist has the appropriate mental health license, which varies from state to state. This includes Licensed Clinical Social Worker (LICSW in Massachusetts), Licensed Marriage and Family Therapist (LMFT) or Licensed Professional Counselor (LPC). He or she might have a Ph.D. or PsyD in Psychology.

2 While it's generally not a good idea to see the same therapist as a relative (unless it's a family therapist), it helps to get referrals from trustworthy sources such as friends, colleagues or organizations that train therapists. If you want to use your insurance, there are also several online sites (e.g. Psychology Today) that match you with therapists who take your insurance.



GOODSHOOT

▶ An initial phone consultation with your potential therapist can ensure you're on the same page about treatment options.

3 Inquire about treatment approaches and specializations. Most therapists can treat depression, anxiety, self-esteem or relationship issues. But if you need help with a cocaine addiction, go to a treatment center or find someone who is a credentialed alcoholism and substance abuse counselor. If you have obsessive-compulsive disorder, make sure your therapist has experience treating OCD. A little research can go a long way.

– Kim Schneiderman, MSW, LCSW, is a psychotherapist and former journalist with a private practice in New York City. She is currently working on her first book, "How to Be the Star of Your Own Story: Writing the Path to Personal Transformation," based on the therapeutic writing workshops she's taught at the 92nd Street Y and JCC in Manhattan. E-mail her your questions at askkim@metro.us.

Your secret's safe

Now, about your other concern: Telling your secrets to a stranger can be quite liberating, especially when that stranger is a trained professional who is legally obligated to keep them. Seasoned therapists are rarely flustered by what they hear. Often privy to both the darkest and brightest corners of the human heart, we recognize that people are dynamic, multifaceted creatures who wear many masks. We take confidentiality very seriously, but there are a few exceptions:

- With written consent, we can share specific information with medical professionals, insurance companies and anyone else you designate.
- We are legally required to report suspected cases of child physical and sexual abuse, past and present (the past is required in case the abuser still has access to children).
- We are legally required to report serious potential threats to harming yourself or another person, especially if you have a plan and/or a weapon.
- We can seek consultation from other mental health professionals, who are also legally obligated to keep this info confidential. In such cases, the therapist will keep your identity anonymous.

And here's a secret about therapists: We have problems too. If anything, being aware of our humanity makes us all the more compassionate.

FINDING A LITTLE FREEDOM AT WORK

▶ Advances in mobile technology make telecommuting an option for many.

Get flexible

"Flexibility is freedom," declares Allison O'Kelly, founder/CEO of Mom Corps. She suggests learning your company's specific options for flexible schedules before approaching your boss. "Check with your human resources department before speaking with your manager, to see if there is a flexible work plan in place. Before diving in headlong, educate yourself on the mutual benefits of flexible work options and be prepared to do the same for your manager."

Telecommute

Heather R. Huhman, founder and president of Come Recommended, is a firm believer in telecommuting. "Many employees are beginning to telecommute to improve their work-life balance," says Huhman. "Many jobs require work that can be completed from home, so talk to your boss about testing out telecommuting for a day or two. If you check in regularly via Skype, e-mail or phone and complete all tasks on time, both the employer and the employee will benefit from the increased freedom telecommuting provides." Bonus: You can wear your American flag PJs all day.

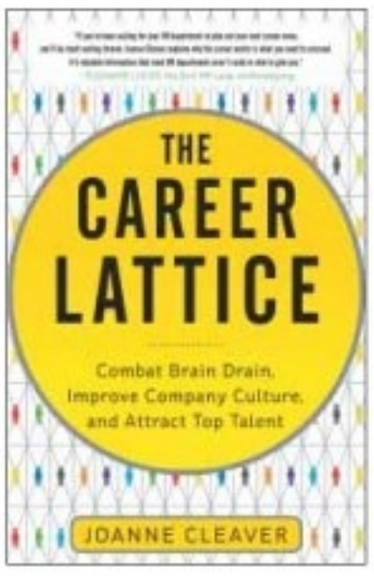
Give the best performance

It's no surprise that top performers are given the most leeway. "If you are exceeding the current standards for your job and contributing to your boss's goals, then you can often ask for and receive more autonomy, because you have built a reserve of trust from your manager," explains retired clinical professor John Millikin. "The more your manager sees that he or she does not need to manage you closely, the more freedom will be allowed."

Growing — and blooming — on the 'Career Lattice'

In 2004, Joanne Cleaver was the deputy business editor at the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel and envisioned herself staying there for decades. Just a few years later, the newspaper industry was in a free fall and Cleaver found herself laid off. But her unorthodox career path — mixing an entrepreneurial approach with freelance and staff positions — allowed her to adjust to the changing media landscape. And she's sure that versatility can help your career, too. Her new book — "The Career Lattice: Combat Brain Drain, Improve Company Culture, and Attract Top Talent" — was released by McGraw-Hill last month.



PROVIDED

▶ Cleaver

Today, Cleaver is president of the Chicago-based media-consulting firm, Wilson-Taylor Associates.

Why is the traditional career ladder collapsing?

We've seen a shift toward team structures in organizations. Companies will have a team devoted to a project, and that team will disperse and reform for another project. Also, during the recession many organizations eliminated entire layers of management, so each rung of the ladder has become much steeper in many cases — and more incapable of developing talent.

Is there a silver lining in any of this?

Now we know we're on our own, and there's a certain freedom in that. The "Lattice" provides structure for channeling the ambition that you have. You don't have to rely on what your human resources department tells you. You don't have to follow in anyone's footsteps or flounder around accumulating certifications that lead nowhere.

What's the first step in designing a "Career Lattice"?

First, you have to inventory your skills. Your job description describes what you need to do to accomplish your job at your organization. But you bring more than that. You have skills and aptitudes that could shape the acquisition of a new skill. So you need a 360-degree inventory of everything you bring to your career. Then you can begin to mix and match your technical skills, experience and natural talents to position yourself for a lateral move. And the more lateral moves you make, the more pieces of your skill set will be validated. BRUCE WALSH

Sounding off on health care

We are getting no help from the television newscasters in understanding what the Obamacare issue is all about. First, it is not the president's job to create laws. Second, the "law" is unconstitutional in that it is not the job of government to be involved with health care. Practically everything the government in Washington touches is made worse: public education, government spending, wars, housing, just to name a few. Health care should be locally controlled or be influenced by state governments not the federal government. And one more thing, Romney says he will "reform" the health care law. What a phoney conservative! He should be seeking to abolish the monstrosity not reform it. FRANK ST. GEORGE, VIA E-MAIL

The Affordable Care Act frees an employee from "job lock," the reluctance to voluntarily terminate employment for fear of losing health care benefits, particularly if one has a pre-existing condition. Now, it will take more than company health insurance to hold a valuable, experienced employee who should be better paid or better treated. GLENN HAYES, VIA E-MAIL

Romney says that if elected he would repeal "the debacle that is Obamacare." In supreme court justice Roberts' decision on the affordable health care act he states that the blueprint for "Obamacare" was laid out by the former governor of Massachusetts. Mitt Romney! Hypocrisy thy name is Republican. ROBERT LA ROSA, VIA E-MAIL

The Supreme Court ruled that Obamacare is Constitutional. But is it the right call? As a nation, we are in a sluggish economy and millions of people are out of work. In my opinion, if you force small businesses to insure all their employees, they will not look to expand or hire more workers. In addition to that, if you force those who cannot afford insurance to buy it, even at a reduced rate you create a hardship. A person might be forced to make a choice between housing and food to pay for insurance. That, in my view, is just not the right way to go. FREDERICK R. BEDELL JR., VIA E-MAIL

Re: 'Flags are for flying, not wearing'

I disagree on one point. The flag is a sacred piece of our national history, but that does not stop people from other countries from proudly displaying their country's colors in whatever garments or accessories they choose, because that is the very nature of America, freedom of expression. So if one chooses to wear the red, white and blue, then what's the harm? One can wear the colors of the flag, but not the flag itself; and, if you so choose, at least make sure that it's made in America! ANTHONY VASSER, VIA E-MAIL

Our soldiers wear U.S. flag patches on their shoulders as part of their uniform. This has been a long-standing tradition, and it was declared mandatory in 2004, with allowances for camouflage. Are we therefore to say that the U.S. military uniform is unpatriotic? DANIEL KING, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. There's a strong chance you might have to deal with someone whom you feel wronged you in the past, but this isn't an opportunity for payback.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Be extremely selective to whom you turn for counsel if you find yourself in need of financial advice. Go only to someone who has had a lot of success in dealing with money matters.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. You know how awful you felt in the past when someone treated you in a deceitful manner, so don't do anything that would cause you to be accused of this type of behavior.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. You're likely to be quite imaginative, which is all well and good, as long as you don't view life's developments more negatively than positively.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. If you find yourself feeling a trifle envious or jealous of a close friend, make that energy into a motivator, no matter how painful it is to do so.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. You could get everyone frustrated with you if you vacillate too much on an important issue and fail to take a stance. In order to command respect, be decisive.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Usually you have a great understanding of life, and allow for the frailties in others. Today, however, you're likely to be hypercritical and do nothing but find fault with everyone. Loosen up.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Although it's not normal, you could be far too gullible and impulsively involve yourself in something that's way over your head, motivated purely by wishful thinking. Keep your feet on the ground.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. The major reason you and your mate could end up in opposition is likely because neither one of you is able to effectively articulate your true feelings.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. When working with unfamiliar materials or tools, you had better make it a point to keep your concentration from wandering. Too many bad things could happen if you don't.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Although it's not normal for you, you're not beyond taking a calculated risk when you think the circumstances call for it. Just make sure what you do is well thought out in advance.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Don't be surprised if people emulate the example you set, especially if you're abrasive and difficult to get along with. Others usually give back what we give out, one way or another. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Celtics taking full advantage of Bird rights, set to double offer of Heat to Ray Allen Garnett's re-signing signals that C's are still contenders

Much to the delight of most Celtics fans, Danny Ainge is firmly in "win now or forever hold your peace" mode. That was confirmed Saturday when it was reported that Kevin Garnett would take the hometown discount of $11.3 million per year for three more years.

Now the question jumps to how do the Celtics best maximize this new, creaky, three-year window? Do they supplement the backcourt with a young talent like Memphis free agent OJ Mayo? Or do they re-examine the Ray Allen situation?

As of yesterday, it sounded like both ideas were very much on the table for Ainge.

The Heat, considered the front-runners for Allen's services during the past week, can only offer the shooting guard $3 million. But the Celtics, who hold Allen's Bird rights, can offer him a contract of around two years for $6 million per, and now seem intent on doing so (Memphis, Atlanta, Dallas and the Clippers are also reportedly interested in signing Allen).

Avery Bradley is now considered the starting 2-guard on the Celtics, and it remains to be seen if Allen is interested in a reduced role going forward. Sports Illustrated's Chris Mannix also reported in June that there was a significant amount of friction between Allen and point guard Rajon Rondo throughout the 2011-12 season.

The revised NBA collective bargaining agreement goes out of its way to help teams re-sign their own players to cap-friendly deals. Therefore, there are scenarios where the Celtics could re-sign Garnett and Allen and still have money left over to offer another free agent the full mid-level exception of $5 million per year for four years.

Free agent frenzy

Dustin Pedroia's eighth-inning solo home run to left tied yesterday's game in Seattle, 1-1, and David Ortiz' RBI sac fly in the 10th plated Ryan Kalish as the Red Sox escaped with a 2-1 extra-innings victory.

Ortiz the lone All-Star for Red Sox

The Red Sox poor start to the 2012 season certainly factored in throughout the MLB All-Star process and the results showed as David Ortiz was picked as the only representative for Boston.

Jarrod Saltalamacchia (.254, 15 HR, 37 RBIs) was a strong candidate at catcher, but Texas' Mike Napoli, Baltimore's Matt Wieters and Minnesota's Joe Mauer got the nod instead.

Spain wins again at Euro2012

Spain put together a remarkable performance yesterday in the Euro2012 Final in Ukraine, beating Italy 4-0 to win its third straight major soccer title.

David Silva and Jordi Alba opened the scoring for Spain, with Fernando Torres and Juan Mata punching in two more goals in the second frame. Goalkeeper Iker Casillas was once again dominant. METRO
